

Application for the Generative AI Institute for Teaching (GAIT)

Are you curious about teaching and working with Generative AI? Do you have ethical concerns about the use of GenAI in academic work and also strive to stay on the edge of innovation? DSI CLEAR invites you to apply for GAIT, a semester-long community of practice where instructors will apply strategies for ethically and responsibly using Generative AI in teaching and learning.

GAIT participants will dive into topics like working with chatbots, academic skill development, and multimedia course design. Resources will be provided such as case studies on the use of GenAI in writing, research, reading, and giving feedback. One of the goals of GAIT is to provide a balanced perspective to empower instructors to make informed decisions about their use of GenAI.

The GAIT cohort will move through the course together to build a dynamic community of practice. Participant engagement will take place in Canvas and in the virtual meetings. In addition, you will have opportunities to share with and learn from your fellow UNT colleagues.
